MORNING REPORT

Naw York, October 28 -The Merald's Winchester correspondent of October 27th tays: The enemy has still a very strong force in the Valley.

It is reliably reported to be reorganizing.

The enemy has a strong force of cavalry in the Duray valley. Under the present stillness movements are being made by the enemy of an eminently important character.

At the sime when the late battle of the 19th took place, the enemy had stationed three brigades of cavalry near Milford Creek in the Luray valley. When the general rebel movement was made, the forces advanced to Buck town Ford on the Shesandoah River, and Front Royal. In the movement stated they were met by Powell's division of cavalry and checked. When the rabels met with defeat they retired to Milford and within the line of fortifications there erected at a commanding position. For certain substantial military reasons, a reconnoitering party of about 300 men was sent out on the 24th from Powell's division in the neighborhood of Front Royal. The expedition was commanded by Major Gibson, who so gallantly distinguished himself in the Averill action at Moorfield in July last.

During the early hours of the morning of the 14th, Major Gibson moved his command across both branches of the Shonandoah river, and moving through Port Royal, passed on toward Milford and the Luray Valley. Before daylight he came upon the apparent. daylight he came upon the enemy's pickets, and drove them on, capturing one or two. He then passed on rapidly toward Milford Creek. A rumor on the streets that General Grant's army is moving, had no effect on gold or battle, with two pieces of artillery, and although his force did not exceed 360, he deployed it in line of battle without a reserve, and charged them

The enemy, perhaps remembering our late astonishing cavalry operations, did nothing more than fire one volley and break. Gibson continued the pursuit as rapidly as it was not sible for him to move forward in the dark

Denn. The enemy kept his artillery on the pike, correspondent with Sheridan says:

Fity seven guis were captured in the last made off to the rear. Owing to Gibson's in fight, twenty-five of which were our own, re Five thousand prisoners, in round numbers tillery to the rear shead, and kept the cavalry right and left on the road to cover its getting
